

Executive Biography

Gregory Jones

Chief Diversity Officer
United Airlines

Gregory (Greg) Jones, a Chicago native and Navy veteran, is the Chief Diversity Officer for United Airlines. He is charged with developing strategic and executive plans for embedding diversity & inclusion principles, policies, training and behaviors throughout the global airline and among its more than 89,000 employees.

Prior to joining United, Greg obtained extensive experience engaging with senior management as a director of diversity & inclusion and corporate staffing at Northwestern Mutual, Bank of America, UBS, Egon Zehnder. He also is an engineer by training and started his career with General Electric Medical Systems, currently known as GE Healthcare.

Greg attended Tuskegee and Stanford Universities, where he received his undergraduate and graduate degrees, respectively in electrical engineering. He currently serves as a member of the Board of Directors for the Thurgood Marshall College Fund, Advisory Board Member for the Organization of Black Aerospace Professionals (OBAP), member of the Executive Leadership Council (ELC) and Distinguished Visiting Professor at Johnson and Wales University.