

Dear Langley Chamber Members,

We are in unprecedented times locally, nationally and globally amid the Novel Coronavirus/COVID-19 pandemic.

Through this time of uncertainty, we have heard from you, our Members, regarding your concerns for the health and safety of your employees, customers and clients, and the overall impact COVID-19 will have on your business operations.

The Chamber has been working diligently to advocate on your behalf and share your concerns with government officials. Last week we had calls with our federal and provincial networks to share the questions and concerns we've been hearing. We were pleased to learn that the Prime Minister and the Premier are open to continued dialogue with the business community and that they acknowledge that the response to local businesses needs to happen in the coming days, not weeks.

As your Chamber we will continue to advocate on your behalf to government officials. Further, we are committed to sharing relevant business information through our social media, newsletters and email channels as soon as it becomes available. We will be posting videos and information that can assist you to cope with the situation as well as provide factual info for you and your employees.

The Chamber has also compiled a variety of resources to assist members with any questions or planning. These are located on our website HERE.

As of today our team will be working remotely from home for their health and safety moving forward. We are here to support and assist but it will be via email and phone, not directly in person at this time.

While this situation is concerning, we can all play a role in exercising the necessary precautions to reduce the impact on our community and protect our families, colleagues, and friends. We will be in touch as soon as more information is available and, as always, please contact us with any issues or concerns you have.

Sincerely,

Brad Kiendl, President

Greater Langley Chamber of Commerce
