Chamber Announces Honorees for 51st Annual Community Service Awards

The Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce will recognize those deserving individuals, groups and businesses who have demonstrated excellence and community leadership in business, volunteer activities and achievement within the Pleasanton community on Wednesday, March 19 at the Firehouse Arts Center. The Community Service Awards began in 1963 to recognize good people doing great things in the community and since then hundreds of recipients have been honored.

Award recipients include:

Turman Commercial Painters, Business Philanthropy Award: For businesses that have provided philanthropic service beyond the scope of normal business activity.

The Hop Yard American Alehouse & Grill, Excellence in Business Award: For businesses that have made a positive impact in the Pleasanton community through their achievement within the scope of normal business activity.

Pleasanton Military Families, Excellence in Service Award: For non-profit organizations that have contributed to Pleasanton.

Greg Thome, Distinguished Individual Service Award: For individuals who have contributed to Pleasanton through exceptional service to the community or philanthropic efforts.

Sarah and Claire Williams, Distinguished Individual Youth Service Award: For youth who have contributed to Pleasanton through exceptional service to the community or philanthropic efforts.

Governor’s plan for drought relief funds potential good news for Valley

Pleasanton should be well positioned to take full and immediate advantage of relief funds that Governor Brown intends to make available to help Californians through the current and future droughts.

Governor Brown recently announced a $687 million drought relief bill to fund improved efficiencies and conservation technologies. He intends to tap existing bond funds from a water and disaster preparation measure passed by voters in 2006.

“The folks in charge of water we rely on day in and day out in Pleasanton should seize the opportunity to accelerate installation of recycled water projects that have been planned for years, but lacked funding sources,” says Scott Raty, Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce CEO. “We all should be talking with our city and state representatives not only to make the funding available, but to make it available here in Pleasanton and the Tri-Valley.”

According to City Operations Services Director Daniel Smith, the availability of low to no interest loans by the state would make it possible for the City of Pleasanton, Zone 7, and DSRSD to move forward and complete projects to install recycled water lines from treatment plants to irrigate some of Pleasanton’s 43 parks, including our 105 acre sports park, Callippe Golf Course and landscape medians throughout Hacienda business park.

Today these public amenities are irrigated with the same potable water every household and business in town depends on. While taking parks and landscape medians out of the potable water equation would go a long way toward closing drought rationing in future years, it won’t help us out this year, because it would take at least two years to complete the projects, even if Sacramento made funds available today says Smith.

According to Smith recycled water projects are becoming the new industry standard for parks, (continued on page 6)

David Stark’s Mixer Secrets Revealed
The combination of hand-held gadgets, wireless networks and an “always open for business” philosophy means we can instantly connect with virtually anyone, anytime and anywhere – with emphasis on the “virtually.”

Do face-to-face, “live” interactions still matter?
As you work with the strong participation at Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce mixers, the answer is “yes.” While Pleasanton is home to dozens of large, medium and small cutting-edge technology companies, the business community still values in-person meetings. In fact, we’ll see more than 100 participants representing lots of different businesses at a typical Chamber mixer.

The Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce will host more than a dozen mixers this year for you to have live, interactive, non-scripted conversations with colleagues from the entire spectrum of Pleasanton businesses. You don’t need internet access, smart phone or anything that needs a battery or 110 volts of alternating current. You just need to be there.

But what does “being there” really mean? After attending countless mixers, I’ve developed a philosophy and special techniques to get the most out of your mixer experience. I’m willing to reveal three of my mixer secrets in an effort to inspire mixer veterans who may be growing weary and to take the nervous edge off mixer novices.

Mixer Secret 1: Set a goal. Before you enter the mixer address into your mapping program and start digging around trying to find the magnetic backing for your name tag, determine what you want to achieve at the mixer. Decide if there’s a specific business connection you want to make or if you just want to meet as many people as possible. Setting a goal will help you decide if the mixer was a success and if it wasn’t what you’ll do differently at the next one.

Mixer Secret 2: Keep an open mind. I firmly believe that the best things happen when you least expect them and this is absolutely true at a mixer. You never know who may participate and the connections you can cultivate. This is a good secret to remember if Secret #1 isn’t panning out.

Mixer Secret 3: The Sea Anemone. This is my favorite Mixer Secret and it’s based on an unassuming sea creature. The Anemone makes its living by lurching on the ocean floor and letting everyone come to it. I use a similar approach when attending a mixer. Rather than trying to elbow my way through a crowded room, while also balancing a plate of heavy appetizers and a beverage (recipe for disaster) I pick a strategic location and lay it out. I look for areas where participants will be passing through such as near the food and beverage tables.

The Sea Anemone technique is highly effective and I typically have as many, if not more quality conversations than if I was dashing and crashing all about the room. In fact, I’ll demonstrate this technique at the next Chamber mixer. You’ll have to guess where I’ll be but once you track me down, the logic of my location will make all kinds of sense.

Give any or all of these Mixer Secrets a try at a Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce mixer and see what happens. The Chamber staff does a great job organizing the mixers and will make sure you feel welcomed at the events. I predict you’ll have a great time and leave with new friends representing lots of different business cultures at a typical Chamber mixer.

Ruby Hill Golf Club to open its doors for Spring Tradeshows
Chamber event open to public

The prestigious Ruby Hill Golf Club, nestled among the sun-washed hills of the historic Livermore Valley wine country, is set to host the Pleasanton Chamber’s Spring Business Tradeshows and Mixer. Ruby Hill Golf Club brings together an array of world-class amenities, from elegant entertaining to personal relaxation to simply fun.

This marks the first time Ruby Hill will host a tradeshow mixer for the Chamber, and they have partnered with Classic Party Rentals and Working Man Brewery for the event, set for Wednesday, April 9.

For exhibitors, the event is an opportunity to reach hundreds of potential customers in a single evening. Attendees have the opportunity to meet local business representatives and build new business relationships. A general admission fee of $12 is due at the venue and includes two drink tickets.

The Chamber’s Tradeshows are held twice a year and replace the monthly networking mixer. This April’s event is open to everyone in the community and represents a great opportunity to network with local businesses in a fun and interactive setting. Bring your co-workers, invite your friends, these are traditionally the biggest events of the year with great food, drinks and prizes.
The graduates of Leadership Pleasanton class of 2013 contributed over $2600 toward the Pioneer Founders Mural that was unveiled recently at 608 Main Street across from the Museum On Main. Other donors were: Yvonne McNamera, The Robert Williams Family, Dave and Robbie Eshelman, Jack and Deanna Sanders, in memory of Jean Silva, by Shirley Anderson, and Nancy and Gary Harrington. Nancy and Gary Harrington, the Harrington Art Partnership, brought the idea of a historic mural of the founders of Pleasanton to the city. They thought this would be an excellent opportunity for the youth of Pleasanton and the newer residents to be able to associate the names of streets to historical figures in Pleasanton’s past. Jim DeMersman, Director of the Museum On Main, was the key source for the initial pioneers and their photos. Charles Huff, Pleasanton historian, as well as pioneer family descendants, were contacted and assisted in locating more of the information required. Finally 16 pioneers were identified and photos were found. The Harrington’s contacted portrait painter, Barbara Stanton. Raised in Pleasanton, she currently lives in Livermore and is probably best known for her miniature paintings. She met with the Harrington’s and after hearing their concept, was named, with the idea this would be a “teaching” tool and people would be able to create her rendition. The final mural includes Angela (Bernal) Neul, Joshua Neul, Phoebe Hearst, Marie (Bernal) Kottinger, John Kottinger, Henry Mohr, “Indian Joe” Guzman, Joseph Black, Walter Briggs, Thomas Orloff, Agostin Bernal, Cornelius Nevin, Edith Zieggenfuss, Jose Maria Amador, General Alfred Pleasonton and Chief Turino. Included in the mural are a couple of individuals, General Alfred Pleasonton, for whom the city was named (although he never visited our city), and Jose Maria Amador, for whom Amador High was named, with the idea this would be a “teaching” tool and people would like to see these two individuals included in the mural. The background setting of the mural is a room from Phoebe Hearst’s home.

By Dr. Peter Holmes DC, AK

It’s that time of year again. Why do some people suffer with allergies when pollen flies in the air and others don’t? There are many mechanisms in the body that fight off on your behalf when stressors are present. You are subject to the same viruses and pollen that everyone else is. Some people handle it better than others. As a health care physician who specializes in natural remedies, I have to go outside of the box and think about what the body can do to protect itself from outside invaders such as pollen and other allergens. A little background on histamine; the main culprit behind runny noses and watery eyes.

Histamine is released by mast cells in response to foreign invaders to the body. It works by attaching to receptors on the blood vessels to dilate them as well as making their walls ‘leaky’ so other white blood cells can attack the invaders. There is a large overflow of liquid that has nowhere to go, so it escapes out of your nasal passages and tear ducts.

Anti-histamines block these receptors, and other important histamine receptors in the rest of the body. Now a word about important things.

Every biochemical molecule that your body produces is important in its own right. Cholesterol, histamine and saturated fatty acids all play a part in your health. Problems occur when there is a buildup of these chemicals. Chemicals in the body are made for a reason, and many have short life spans. Either the chemical gets broken down by an enzyme into unusable parts, or, in the case of cholesterol, becomes something very useful like testosterone and estrogen. A buildup of any biochemical is the result of missing the tools that change it from one form to another.

From a natural health care stand point, there are three main areas I look at when dealing with allergies. The first is to reduce histamine. The second is to see if your body is degrading the allergens that are in the blood stream. The third main issue I look for is to make sure the body has the proper response to the histamine in your blood. I use Whole Food products from two companies, Standard Process (SP) and MediHerb (MH). They have several great nutritional products that help maintain normal function of body tissues and cells. The interior of the cells are where most of the biochemical products are made, so a normal working mast cell is important.

Here are some specific examples: Albizia from MH maintains the normal quantity of histamine released by the mast cells. Antroxein from SP helps maintain the normal flow of blood into the liver so the liver can clean out the garbage (pollen) so it does not build up in the body. There are many products that maintain the normal function of the tissues and cells of the adrenal gland. The adrenal glands make adrenaline and cortisol, both instrumental in helping keep the need for histamine release to a minimum.

Besides whole food supplemen- tation, the patient’s diet plays a big role in how allergens affect the body. Eating processed carbohydrates, such as sugar, bleached or other processed flour and grains (e.g. white rice, almost all bread products and all packaged snack foods and drinks) can have ill effects on the adrenal glands. A stressed adrenal gland causes many issues in the body that can eventually lead to allergies, asthma and many inflammatory conditions (any condition ending in ‘itis’). The short answer to taking care of allergies that most people use (taking anti-histamines under your doctor’s supervision) is temporary, but may be enough for some. Having very bad, life interrupting responses to allergens can be lessened on a permanent basis through holistic health care practitioners that include chiropractic, acupuncture, reflexology and whole food nutritional supplementation. Of course any natural practitioner will focus on your diet, exercise habits and other parts of your life style.
