Supporting Alberta's craft liquor industry with fair AGLC markups for small producers

Issue

The current Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission (AGLC), Markup Rate regime provides access for Alberta's craft breweries to the Connect Logistics Services alcohol distribution system at a reduced rate. Alberta's Craft Distillers and Wineries/Meaderies are not extended this support, putting small scale industry at a competitive disadvantage.

Background

The craft distillery business represents an exciting area of growth throughout North America. The lure of diversifying local economies has led many jurisdictions to create distillery friendly regulations and tax relief to attract entrepreneurs. This has led to the establishment of over 700 new North American craft distilleries in the past decade, including 60 in Canada[1]. Alberta is home to nearly 30 producers. The past fifteen years has also seen rise to a cottage fruit wine and mead industry that is ready to expand its horizons.

Alberta seems particularly well positioned to embrace these enterprises. Alberta's past and present remain intertwined with our incredible agricultural sector. As a world class provider of wheat, barley and rye, and home to flourishing berry crops, Alberta produces some of the worlds' finest ingredients for spirits and fruit wines. With Albertans' natural entrepreneurialism and this agricultural base, the craft liquor industry is on a path to success.

Unfortunately, there remain regulatory obstacles hindering this success. AGLC operates the provincial alcohol warehousing and distribution system through a company called Connect Logistics Services Ltd. This centralised system is a monopoly on alcohol distribution, and charges all manufactures a markup rate per litre on its products. The rates vary according to the category of alcohol. Currently, the categories are:

1. Spirits
2. Refreshment Beverages
3. Wine and Sake
4. Fruit Wine and Mead
5. Beer

Within each category there are varying levels of markup, roughly in relation to the percentage of alcohol, or in relation to the distribution method. This is where the inequitable playing field for craft distillers, wineries, and meaderies are revealed.

Craft spirit distillers, wine and mead producers must pay the full markup rate for their products. This markup adds from $10.36 to $18.33 per litre sold for distillers and from $3.91 to $6.56 for fruit wineries[2]. This is a standard rate applied to all spirits and wines, whether produced by major international corporations or by small local small businesses. Craft distillers, wine and mead producers can access a lower rate, but only if the product is sold from their manufacturing site or at artisan markets.

Clearly, no business can grow if it essentially excludes itself from the distribution system, but it is just as clear that small business cannot compete against the powerful and wealthy global alcohol companies. The high per liter fees represent a minor inconvenience to multibillion-dollar corporations, who dominate advertising and retail space. For small scale businesses, adding such costs to their products cuts straight to their bottom line.

Considering the potential employment and economic activity that craft distilleries, wineries, and meaderies represent to local economies and as a market for Alberta agricultural products, the province has a keen interest in seeing this industry grow. Fortunately, rectifying the distribution cost difficulties for Albertan producers is as simple as providing a level playing field for all Alberta entrepreneurs.

The Markup Rate fees are based upon alcohol percentage and distribution method. For craft distillers, wineries, and meaderies, the only relief is by attempting to sell their products without distributing through the Connect Logistics Services Ltd. But Alberta craft beer brewers have a path to the store shelves. Craft breweries can qualify for a significantly reduced markup rate within the Connect distribution system provided the company's total sales do not exceed a predefined limit (400 000 hectolitres). This clause has allowed Alberta to become home to several successful craft brewing companies.

Some craft alcohol producers manufacture and distribute their products in the same facility with production facilities and a retail space within the same building. They are in essence acting as both a manufacturer and a licensee. When moving product, either on paper or physically, from production to retail a craft distiller is considered a licensee that is buying their own product and is required to send payment to AGLC for the whole sale price. This payment is capital that is then unavailable to the manufacturer. When the AGLC receives this payment, they will then deduct a deposit fee, recycling fee, markup and GST.[3] Once they have collected these deductions the difference is then sent back to the manufacturer, which can take weeks. The solution for this is simple. Allow producers who both manufacture and sell their product in the same building to calculate the deductions required by AGLC and remit only this portion instead of the entire wholesale price. This is especially important for craft distillers who are in the start-up phase of their business where access to capital and having cash flow available is imperative. It will also enable them to move their product more freely from production floor to retail space, allowing them to meet the demand for their product without impeding their cash flow.

Craft alcohol is an industry in its infancy with incredible potential. But the North American and European industry is pushing ahead of Alberta, assisted by regulatory and tax revisions. As jurisdictions nurture their craft industry, Alberta risks being outcompeted by brands with a decade of growth. Reducing markups for small scale producers can give small businesses a chance to compete. This support in accessing the market will strengthen the businesses and positively affect provincial revenues, as new well-paying jobs are added to economy. As with any new industry, craft alcohol faces many hurdles in its road to success, but government policy shouldn't be one of them. A fair and equal rate for small producers, regardless of type of alcohol, is overdue. To give our distillers, wineries and meaderies a chance to compete in the corporate dominated alcohol industry, Alberta must give them the competitive support they need by extending the small volume reduced rates to spirit distillers, wineries and meaderies.

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce recommends the Government of Alberta:

1. AGLC and Connect Logistics implement a markup rate per litre reduction for small scale distilleries, wineries, and meaderies;

2. AGLC and the Alberta Craft Distillers Association, and the Alberta Cottage Wineries and Meaderies Association open a dialogue to establish the appropriate definition of a small-scale producer;

3. AGLC and the Alberta Craft Distillers Association, and the Alberta Cottage Wineries and Meaderies Association open a dialogue to establish the appropriate markup rate for small scale producers; and

4. Allow liquor manufacturers who produce and sell product from the same facility to calculate AGLC deductions including deposit fee (if applicable), recycling fee (if applicable), markup, and GST and only remit this portion from the wholesale price.
