Excellence in Human Resources Award

Competition for human resources and labour shortages is quickly becoming a reality as a result of aging demographics across Canada. Acquiring talented people matters to small businesses too. Companies that recognize the threat of labour shortages will focus on who they recruit and select, how they retain talented employees and what recognition they provide these employees. This award is designed to recognize human resources excellence in companies of any size that develop and practice successful approaches to protect their businesses from the challenge of labour shortages.
