We're Going Electronic

Lately, the Chamber has been rolling out exciting new changes that many of our members have been asking for, and others are sure to find beneficial. Over the past year, the Chamber has discussed with board members, staff and our valued business members the benefits of “going electronic,” and has recently decided to do just that.

Not only will it save time and resources, it will also save a great deal of money on printing and postage.

Greenville Chamber President and CEO, Byron Taylor, has taken in the benefits of digital – and – printed communications, while keeping in mind the needs and wishes of Chamber members.

“It really comes down to dollars and cents. The Greenville Chamber of Commerce will still send direct mail of certain invitations and other pertinent information when a more formal approach is necessary,” he said. “However, after close analysis, we have determined that we can do more for our members by greatly reducing the amount we spend on postage every year. This will also free our staff up to participate more in all forms of our local media as well as other avenues including texting, website, and social media to communicate.”

The decision to go electronic in most of our communications comes following the feedback of the community. According to a recent survey submitted, the majority of our business community prefers digital communication.

With technology changing every day, more people are relying on their information online. There is no doubt that business across the globe is becoming digital. Digital engagement between companies and their suppliers is five times larger in the leading sectors than in others. This engagement can range from digital payments and advertising to interactions on social media and in virtual marketplaces. In leading sectors, digital and mobile aids help workers do their jobs more efficiently, and routine tasks are digitized at the same time as new digital jobs are created.

Although many enjoy receiving electronic communications, others still prefer the tried and true printed versions of newsletters, invitations, brochures and announcements. All Chamber electronic correspondence can be easily printed by clicking on the document and sending it to a printer.

As always, the Greenville Chamber welcomes the feedback of our members and the community. Please contact us at susan@greenvillechamber.com and share your thoughts!

CHAMBER WALK WEDNESDAYS

Greenville Chamber staff spent some time visiting with representatives of the Redeemed Christian Church of God at their West Greenville location.

We were welcomed by administration of the organization and given a full tour of the facility.

We began in the administration building, a modern professional building that includes a fully functional credit union.

The property also includes a 50-room hotel, complete with meeting space and a dining facility. This hotel will be used to accommodate guests for the organization's annual conference.

The most impressive structure on the property is the Pavilion Center. This massive building seats at least 10,000 people. The Pavilion Center is also used for annual conferences.

The Redeemed Christian Church of God campus also includes a water tower and residential cabins. The property also features a large meeting hall for rent.

RCCG is the parent company of Hope For You, a charitable organization that helps families in crisis by supplying immediate needs like food, clothing and other essentials. In the near future, they plan to assist qualified families with financial aide and financial counseling.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO LIVE WITH VARICOSE OR SPIDER VEINS.

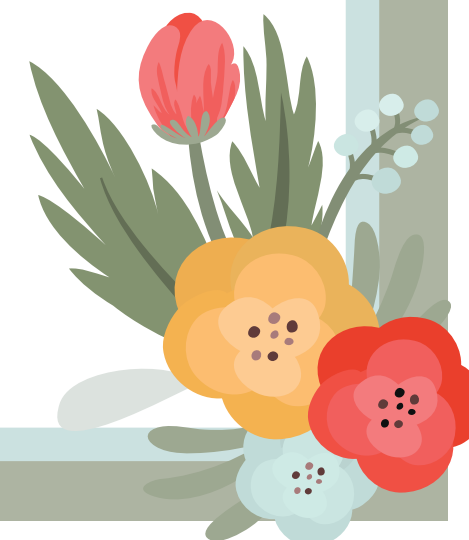

Surgical Associates at Hunt Regional Medical Center offers a tried-and-true procedure called sclerotherapy that can make your legs look oh-so-smooth and youthful in only one or two office visits.

And it's easy to get started. Just give us a call today at 903.408.5700.
