

Mark Levinson is an Attorney at Law who specializes in family law matters. He helps clients through the process of divorce including custody, spousal support, child support, and division of assets and debts. He also drafts prenuptial and postnuptial agreements. A portion of his practice is devoted to working with clients to modify their judgments of divorce to reflect the change of circumstances, including custody and support.

Mark Levinson's 40-year career in law began with a variety of civil litigation experience. His practiced areas including construction, business, and school board litigation, as well as personal injury and toxic torts. To further his experience, he sought a change and accepted the challenge of engaging in a new field of law, family law, which he's been practicing for over 20 years. He also had the pleasure of teaching two family courses at Valley College – one to Legal Secretaries and one to Paralegals. The hallmark of his practice is close and continuing client contact to assure his clients have all of the pertinent information regarding their divorce and to keep them advised of all aspects of their case.

Unfortunately, divorce is typically not a pleasurable experience for the parties involved. Therefore, what makes Mark Levinson a requested advocate is his ability to explain the process in an easy and understandable way while aggressively representing his clients' interests. His passion for making sure that kids are not directly involved in the dispute between their parents, makes him a highly sought after counselor. Overall, he tries to ease the tension and make this process as painless as possible.
