

Get Peace of Mind with Big Bear Cabin Check

In the late 1980s, a friend asked Brian Butler to “check on” his second home in Big Bear for any evidence of rodents or pests, broken windows, fallen trees, water leaks or trespassers. As Brian looked around the exterior of his friends’ home, an idea struck him to start a business with his wife, Bridgett. Big Bear Cabin check would offer a service offered nowhere else here.

The business offers absentee homeowners with a visitation service to homes to check for problems. It provides peace of mind, knowing that someone is keeping a lookout for problems and issues that need addressing.

A friendly and engaging couple, Brian and Bridgett happily moved to Big Bear and started the home-based business.

“Beginning in the 1960s, I spent time at a family cabin, enjoying the outdoors and all the activities that went with it. It was always fun. After Bridgett and I met, I was anxious to bring her here,” said Brian.

Big Bear Cabin Check will visit a client home according to the standard or custom visitation plan chosen or even a one-time emergency visitation.

“We will create a plan for a client, weekly, bi-weekly, monthly, semi-annually or tailor it to whatever the client desires,” said Brian. He and Bridgett both believe in superior customer service.

Visits are randomly timed, in the event the home is being watched. If the Butlers see evidence of squatters or trespassers, they do not contact law enforcement. Rather, the owner is notified and reports it to law enforcement.

A band guitarist and back-up vocalist whenever the opportunity presents itself, Brian has played in bands for years, But when both of his parents fell ill, he gave it up and Washington State. The couple moved to Redondo Beach, where Bridgett began working as a personal assistant to a wealthy eccentric who throws lavish benefit events.

Previously, they had been employed by a pest extermination company. “My eyes are trained to look for the signs and identify which pests are present that may cause damage to the home, said Bridgett.

However, the Butlers do not provide repair or maintenance service or pest control service. Rather, they hope to form partnerships with local service providers who they in turn would recommend to clients in need of a roofer, a landscaper, a plumber, or pest eradication service. For homes with key boxes, they will also check home interiors, but they are not key holders. Clients will be provided with videos, photos and written reports.

Brian and Bridgett hope that word will quickly spread about their new type of business and soon they will be providing absentee homeowners with peace of mind that someone is looking out for their treasured home or investment.

Interested homeowners may contact Brian or Bridgett to schedule an appointment to discuss your needs at (909) 547-0385.

~ Ellen Clarke