Post-COVID-19 and the Future of Work

"Many experts are predicting that we will never be able to return to a pre-coronavirus state. Things have changed and will continue to evolve. The future of work, which has been discussed for years, is now here. We are living amid a revolution that will change the way we work..."

... As we try to ride through the pandemic, digitization is facilitating virtual work environments resulting in cost and time savings benefits for both employees and employers. Governments are also trying to move this process along by leading from the front with virtual work teams and online meeting platforms. Providing e-learning courses is another way to keep services open during this time. With the advent of 5G technology, we can prepare for a greater acceleration of online services. And as governments around the world focus on containing COVID-19, the next strategy should be about embracing a workplace that is more virtual in nature."

Okanagan College's CSCT is adapting to this change, and is prepared to help you do the same. Our free webinars and online open enrolment courses (available on the right hand side) help you and your business prepare for this new future. Our paid programming is eligible training under the BC Employer Training Grant, which is still open during Covid-19, which reimburses 60% or more to successful applicants - Ask us how!
