Company History? Years in business?

Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital was built to serve the growing Huron Valley community in 1986 so that residents had an emergency center and a hospital close to their homes and families without having to drive to Detroit. Some of the original families and community leaders who helped fund the hospital continue to sit on the Advisory Board to lend advice on the best ways to serve our community. The hospital has expanded twice since it was originally built in 1986, and continues to expand services to meet the community's needs.
