

Tim Zorc's Personal and Professional Short Bio

Tim Zorc is an engaged lifelong resident of Indian River County as a Realtor, builder, environmental advocate, community volunteer, elected official, loving husband and father of three school aged children.

Tim is a third-generation builder, one of the youngest to pass the State of Florida's certified building contractor exam in 1981. Tim's experience as a business owner and consultant has given him a keen perspective on the effects of unvetted regulations and excessive taxation. During his career Tim has designed, built, and managed the construction of quality residential and commercial building projects.

Tim understands that a healthy Indian River Lagoon enhances our quality of life and local economy. The Bethel Creek flushing study is just one of Tim's many initiatives to find solutions to restore the lagoon to the days of vibrant seagrass beds that provide critical habitat for the diverse lagoon ecosystem.

As a volunteer, Tim has given ten thousand plus hours of service for local charities, adoption/foster care awareness, including 15 years on the Indian River County Volunteer Ambulance Squad.

Tim Zorc desires nothing more than to continue to work hard at creating new opportunities for families and businesses while preserving Indian River County's rich culture and dynamic history.
