Bio at a Glance

My great passion is to educate and equip people to navigate our modern financial system. From setting clear goals to protecting loved ones and growing wealth, I want others to know what I know about how to plan for their future. Although I began my career as a seagoing engineer and Naval officer, I found my way to the financial world as a collection manager. That's where I learned firsthand that people need good advice about their finances that puts their best interests first. Getting licensed as a financial advisor was a natural next step, and I joined the Ameriprise team because they take the advisor responsibility seriously. I've been married to my dream girl for five years and we have been very efficient at making children – two sets of twins! Since they're only about 18 months apart, it's been a tremendous joy to watch them grow closer as siblings and friends. I've lived in Lewisville since 2009, and through getting to know my church, neighbors, and local business owners, I've fallen in love with our city. I also serve on the Board of Directors for the Lewisville Area Chamber of Commerce and it's my wonderful privilege to be a part of developing the Speakers Bureau.
