Single Payer System

- ▶ Single-payer system is a health care system in which one entity – a single payer – collects all health care fees and pays for all health care costs.
- ▶ Proponents of a single-payer system argue that because there are fewer entities involved in the health care system, the system can avoid an enormous amount of administrative waste.
- ▶ Instead, all health care providers in a single-payer system would bill one entity for their services.
- ▶ Within a single-payer system, all citizens would receive high-quality, comprehensive medical care PLUS the freedom to choose providers.
- ▶ Paperwork would be dramatically reduced with the elimination of bills, co-pays and deductibles.
- ▶ A single-payer system – like the system in Canada – is NOT socialized medicine

Canadian Health System

- ▶ Canada's health care system is a group of socialized health insurance plans that provides coverage to all Canadian citizens. It is publicly funded and administered on a provincial or territorial basis, within guidelines set by the federal government.
- ▶ Under the health care system, individual citizens are provided preventative care and medical treatments from primary care physicians as well as access to hospitals, dental surgery and additional medical services. With a few exceptions, all citizens qualify for health coverage regardless of medical history, personal income, or standard of living.
- ▶ Canada's health care system is the subject of much political controversy and debate in the country. Some question the efficiencies of the current system to deliver treatments in a timely fashion, and advocate adopting a private system similar to the United States. Conversely, there are worries that privatization would lead to inequalities in the health system with only the wealthy being able to afford certain treatments.
- ▶ Regardless of the political debate, Canada does boast one of the highest life expectancies (about 80 years) and lowest infant mortality rates of industrialized countries, which many attribute to Canada's health care system.
