

2019 Engineering Organization Volunteer of the Year Awards

Each Georgia engineering organization may submit its Volunteer of the Year. The organization should present the award to a member who assists in building the future of the group. Volunteers provide their time, service, and expertise often without recognition. This award allows the opportunity to honor members that go the extra mile to ensure the organization's success. The award is for volunteers that contribute to the engineering industry through planning, support, and implementation of programs. Volunteers also cultivate the advancement of the engineering profession via community involvement and education.

Each organization's Volunteer of the Year will be honored at the 2019 Georgia Engineering Awards, a black-tie event to be held on Saturday, February 23, 2019. Additionally, an overall Engineering Organization Volunteer of the Year Award will be presented at the Georgia Engineering Awards. The Georgia Society of Professional Engineers (GSPE) coordinates the Engineer of the Year awards, and the Engineering Council of Birmingham selects the overall Engineering Organization Volunteer of the Year.
