

Riley Cote
Former Pro Athlete,
National Hockey League (NHL)

Riley is a Canadian former professional ice hockey left winger in the National Hockey League (NHL), who spent four seasons with the Philadelphia Flyers where he was well-known for his role as an enforcer.

Upon retiring from the NHL, Cote founded the Hemp Heals Foundation, a 501 (c) 3 non-profit organization dedicated to promoting cannabis/hemp as a viable renewable resource that can help increase the quality of lives of all people.

Cote sits on the PAHIC (Pennsylvania Hemp Industries Council) board. He is an Athletes For Care co-founder and the NHL League Ambassador, a role that allows him to continue pursuing his passion to help athletes find safe, non-toxic ways to find relief, manage pain and guide them to understand self-healing.

Riley recently launched a hemp derived CBD recovery product line called BodyChek Wellness.
