Patricia Korosi has been a career federal public servant for the past 14 years. With an academic background in Nutrition and Food Science, she has gained extensive experience in science based food regulatory issues. She has dealt with issues involving pesticides, novel foods and ingredients, food additives, Natural Health Products, food and nutrition labelling, and health claims. Patricia has gained a broad perspective on these topics from her work from the regulator side at Health Canada's PMRA, the enforcement side from work at the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and from industry's perspective from her work at Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada.
