

DAVID PERRI

David J. Perri, P.E., is the current Commissioner for the Department of Licenses and Inspections for the City of Philadelphia. Perri, a registered professional engineer, rose through the ranks at L&I, ending up as chief code inspector and deputy commissioner before moving to the Streets Department. Perri served as Streets Commissioner from 2013 to 2015 until then Mayor-elect Jim Kenney selected him to head L&I.

David has also served as the City's technical adviser to Philadelphia Accessibility Advisory Board and the Board of Building Standards. As the Commissioner of Licenses and Inspections he oversees a department with 384 employees and an annual operating budget of $31 million.