Understanding Venting for the Salesperson - Part I - Wood

The target class audience is "new" salespeople or sales personnel that have never experienced a hearth appliance installation.

This class will offer an "installation" perspective to the salesperson unfamiliar with hearth appliance installations. The goal is to improve the salesperson confidence in the venting & installation process. We will explain basic construction considerations, what venting options might preferred over others and why, and discuss some installation considerations that can and should be addressed at the time of the sale to help eliminate unanticipated installation delays.

The goal is that, with this better understanding of venting and installation procedures, the sales process will be improved for the salesperson, the consumer and the installer. Ultimately, this training will help retailers have a more professional staff, have more thorough job estimates and have less unanticipated issues – all because everyone had a better understanding of the "process".

If You Show it, They'll Buy It

This session introduces a major new research study that identifies how dealers, builders and remodelers can increase the salability of their projects, and elevate their reputations among homeowners and home buyers. Better yet, the research is combined with turn-key design ideas developed by Visbeen architects. In a nutshell, dealers, builders, and remodelers will emerge with a fresh understanding of how today's homeowners envision various rooms, and how those rooms can be made much more appealing via design and amenities such as fireplaces and outdoor living products.

3:15pm – 4:45pm
